Subject: Re: Withdrawal of Consent for Ongoing Therapy for Aidan and Raina

Thank you for your response.

To clarify, there is no court order requiring therapy for Aidan and Raina at this time.

Under the current Final Parenting Plan entered June 25, 2024, I retain joint healthcare decision-making authority for the children. I have exercised my right under the Parenting Plan to withdraw consent for therapy at Larch Counseling for Aidan and Raina effective immediately.

The protection order does not alter the decision-making rights outlined in the Parenting Plan, nor does it mandate continuation of therapy services.

I respectfully ask that my withdrawal of consent be honored until the pending legal matters are resolved.

Thank you for your professionalism and for ensuring the children's emotional wellbeing during this difficult time.

Sincerely,
Veronika Goodnight

Hi Veronika,

I have received this request. Since there are new legal documents, I will have to review them, and consult our attorney to make sure we are being compliant with the legal system and the care we provide the children.

Dear Danielle,Mario/Dan,

I am writing to formally withdraw my consent for therapy sessions for my children Aidan Goodnight-Ralidak and Raina Goodnight-Ralidak at Larch Counseling.

Recent developments have raised serious concerns regarding the use and content of Aidan and Raina's therapy notes. The notes were used in ongoing legal proceedings in a manner that was misleading, harmful, and detrimental to the children's emotional health. The records show significant inconsistencies, including disclosures that Raina lied, and reflect a one-sided perspective primarily drawn from sessions conducted during my residential time.

As the parent who initially organized therapy for the children, I have always prioritized their emotional well-being. However, given the current temporary separation order, the misuse of therapy records, and the risk of further emotional harm, I must insist that all therapy services for Aidan and Raina be paused immediately until the pending legal matters are resolved.

This withdrawal of consent does not apply to Elora Goodnight-Ralidak, whose therapy related to prior trauma continues to be authorized and warranted.

Please confirm receipt of this communication and cancel any pending sessions for Aidan and Raina effective immediately.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely,
Veronika Goodnight
Mother of Elora, Aidan, and Raina Goodnight-Ralidak
